Are you new to the field of afterschool and expanded learning? Perhaps you want to make big or small changes to your existing program or need standardized forms for all your program sites to use. Or perhaps you are starting to think about program evaluation and just don't know where to start. If any of this rings true, read on. Beyond the Bell: A Toolkit for Creating Effective Afterschool and Expanded Learning Programs is for you! This guide - available in both hardcopy and online - is meant for program leaders from both community-based and school-based programs as a resource to help you through all the challenges of starting and running a program. It works well both for those starting a brand-new program and those looking to improve an existing program. We start this Toolkit at the foundation: management practices that are critical to building high-quality programs. This latest version of the Beyond the Bell Toolkit is updated to reflect changes in research and in the field from practitioners like you. We hope it will be a resource you can return to many times as your program grows and changes to reflect youth participants, your community, and your own leadership.

Welcome, Blademann

The Beyond the Bell Online Toolkit is meant for program leaders from both community-based and school-based programs as a resource to help you through all the challenges of starting and running a program. It works well both for those starting a brand-new program and those looking to improve an existing program. We start this Toolkit at the foundation: management practices that are critical to building high-quality programs. This latest version of the Toolkit has been updated to reflect changes in research and in the field from practitioners like you. We hope it will be a resource you can return to many times as your program grows and changes to reflect youth participants, your community, and your own leadership.

The Toolkit is divided into four main sections:

- Develop (including information about program management and design)
- Implement (including information about partnerships and collaboration and program delivery)
- Evaluate (including information about collecting and using data to answer questions and make improvements)
- Improve (including information about how to bring all of the pieces together to continuously improve your program)

If you are starting a brand-new program or are thinking in a new way about your program, we recommend that you start at the beginning with the section on Management. Program management is the foundation of a high-quality program, and

Online Toolkit Core Process

Management

The management of afterschool and expanded learning programs can be structured in many ways. In some cases, the executive director of the organization also serves as the program leader. In other cases, a clear delineation exists between organizational leadership (the executive director and the leadership team) and program management (the program leader and site coordinators). The management practices we recommend are relevant in both contexts, but the players who conceptualize and implement them may differ. If you work in program management in an existing organization, you should make sure to align your program management practices with the organization's existing structures. If you are starting a program from scratch, use your local resources (other local programs, schools, and advisory board members) to help you create management practices that provide a sound foundation for a high-quality program. We are

- Policies and Procedures
- Resource Management
- Staffing
